CURRENCY REFORM GROVER'S THEME

COMING MESSAGE WILL BE VERY POINTED.

He Thinks the Present Financial System Is Vicious and Responsible For Many Of the Commercial Ills and Will Report a New Scheme to Congress.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—It is reported here that the President is considering the idea of submitting to the country a plan for currency reform. He believes that the currency system is inherently vicious; that it is responsible for financial ills. which must recur so long as it is maintained. Satisfied with this diagnosis he will undoubtedly prescribe a remedy calculated to give the finances that this can be done only by supplanting the present system. The subject will be a dominant feature in his message to congress in December. It is said he will favor many of the suggestions made by the bankers' national convention at Baltimore in September. What is known as the Baltimore plan adopted at that convention appealed to the President as having features of undoubted merit. He obtained a copy of the plan and since that time he has been studying and working on the subject. Briefly stated the Baltimore plan provides for a guaranty fund obtained by levying a small tax upon all the banks. This fund is to be used to pay the notes of banks which become insolvent. Since it became whispered among financiers that the President was preparing to address congress upon currency system, so many suggestions have reached him that he thought it well to gather expert opinion among bankers whom he could not personally consult. The present visit 250. Grand total, 1,082. Average, 25 of William E. He is urging the president to recommend to congress the appointment of a currency commission, nonpartisan in character and composed of representative men of all sections, which shall consider the currency question in its various bearings and report a system of reform to congress

Congress of Conciliation Attracts Large Crowds at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov 15.—Miss Jane Addams was chairman of the morning session of the congress of conciliation yesterday, and in taking the chair she made a sharp, incisive speech, after which she introduced Joseph D. Weeks, editor Iron World, who spoke on "The relations of Employer and Employe in Manufacturing Affairs." He thought legislative action on labor matters would inevitably result in failure, and fair dealing between man and man was the only remedy.

The next speaker was M. M. Garland, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, who spoke on "Sliding Scales and Kindred Methods." He said the greed of employers was the main cause of all labor troubles and could see no adequate remedy which might be applied until employers would act justly.

In the afternoon Commissioner of Labor Carroll D. Wright spoke on the "Distinction Between Compulsory and Voluntary Arbitration and Distinction Between Compulsory Arbitration and Public Investigation of Labor Disputes." He advocated compulsory arbitration as the long looked for remedy for existing troubles, and thought the scheme entirely feasible.

Prof. Henry C. Adams, secretary of the inter-state commerce commission, was the next speaker. He spoke on "The Economies of Arbitration," and enthusiastically supported the idea, claiming it to be the duty of the government to at once institute boards of arbitration.

He denounced compulsory arbitration in the strongest terms, advising workmen and women to rise and resist by every means within their power any attempt to force it upon them. He justified strikes and labor warfare as the inherent rights of the working people to defend their interest. In conclusion he said: "There is a law of growth and development in this labor movement, just as sure, just as inevitable as there is in gravitation, as there is in attraction and repulsion. You will find that though the labor movement recedes it never comes back to the original starting point."

The chairman then announced the convention as adjourned.

When Governor-elect Upham passed through Milwaukee Tuesday morning on his way from Racine to Marshfield he had at his own request, a long conference with Captain King, to whom he offered the adjutant-generalship. He urged Captain King to accept it, and the captain said that after thinking the matter over he would do so under conditions, provided he could arrange his affairs so that the acceptance of the office would not materially interfere with other plans which he had in view. Captain King's decision will probably be known to Major Upham at a meeting of state officers-elect to be held at the Pfister hotel Saturday.

THE LUTHERAN VOTE.

Many misgivings were entertained before the election, as to the attitude of the Lutheran vote. All have now been dispelled.

That the important element could long remain hostile to the republican party, did not seem probable, and their return to the fold is occasion for general congratulation.

The Germans throughout the state pessess intelligence and a large majority of them have long been identified with the republican party. They were loath to leave it four years ago when they were led to believe that their churches and schools were in danger and the fact of their speedy return indicates that they are now fully convinced that their fears were groundless. While the occasion con- and was not assassinated; he looked tributed to a democratic victory in at a cross-eyed man in a street car nished democratic orators with a good deal of cheap thunder, the subterfuge was too transparent to last, and the little red school house is no longer regarded as an enemy. Religious literty is one of the fundamental principles of the republican party. Freedom of thought and freedom of speech is cheerfully conceded to every lawabiding citizen. Personal liberty and religious license which plainly translated means "every man a law to himself" is one of the cardinal principles of democracy.

As a result the worst element of emigrants find in the democratic camp, congenial soil, and very naturally allie themselves with this party of warm hospitality that stands ready to receive them with an interpreter, as the gates swing in at Castle Garden and other ports of entry.

It is perfectly natural that the intelligent German is not slow to discern the difference in the make up and ambitions of the two great national organizations, and he very naturally turns to the republican party.

He comes from a land that has profited by a good government and when the church is recognized as a basic force. His ambition is satisfied with religious liberty, and his attention is at once turned to citizenship with a desire to become a part and parcel of the best government of any nation under the sun. His industry and frugality win their way to success. Finally publican victory, the republican vote of 1894 fell off from that of 1893. This indicates that very many democrats stayed away from the polls. It is fair now to ask whether in all probability the landslide would not have been bigger if the so-called stay-athomes had actually gone to the pol s and voted? We think that what is left of the democratic party can thank its stars that the stay-at-homes did stay at home. The landslide might have been an annihilation.

But Queer Things Happened to Him Just

There is a St. Louis gentleman of uncertain age but with quite an amiable disposition, residing out on a suburban road, who has a grievance and he does not care who knows it. As the story goes this particular West Ender has a wife and three or four children, and incidentally everything else to make him happy. There is only one fault in the family-the wife is very superstitious. She believes in dreams and signs and omens to the The disgusted husband started out the other Light to convince his better half that there was nothing in dreams and owners. He turned over the salt box at the table and did not get mad; he walked under a stepladder the state in 1890 and 1892, and for- and carried out none of the instructions that would prevent a horrible disaster; and he did many other things that caused his wife to believe that he would certainly die before morning. He didn't die, however, but awoke the next morning with a regular Mr. Bowser smile on his face. He did not forget to call his wife's attention to the fact, either, and reminded her that hereafter he did not want to hear any more silly talk about "thus and so" being a sure sign of "such and such." The head of the house left home in a happy frame of mind that morning; firmly believing that he had convinced his wife.

He alighted from a car at Locust and Sixth streets, and, after walking half a block north on Sixth street, fell into a cellar. Only one finger was broken, but he was jolted up in such a manner as to cause grave uneasiness. While returning home in a car the car jumped the track, and he narrowly escaped death. Upon reaching his residence he accidentally tumbled over a baby carriage and rebroke his finger. The following day he was at home in bed, and while the ever-comforting wife ministered to his wants, he never mentioned anything about her superstition.

Reminiscences of Janesville. Now fifty years since first we stood Upon the Rock so firm and good; Since first we wandered through the glen All hazel brush as it was then.

Since first the city took a leap Across the stream with works so fleet. To build a house of brick and stone, As there it stood almost alone.

To call it then a little city

It would require a little ditty;

'Twas like a poem of Poet Poe, When the house was raised for Mr. Doc. A fitting word his name to honor For his own worth and not another:

A wreath of beauty we would fling, And to his memory we would cling. A little school select and true Was only formed for very few;

And if the teacher we would heed, Her maiden name was Fidelia Teed. The children's party that we planned We now doth think it truly grand,

The accordian music that we gave

Made children march like soldiers brave O wonderous power that gave to man The strength of thought to work and plan To bring the city from the glen, All hazel brush as it was then.

The electric car that seems to fly, Which took its cue from out the sky, Is still a wonder to the age As still as pleasure to the sage.

O wonder Rock thy flowing stream Will brighten all our waking dream, For thy serene and steady course Will raise our heart unto thy source.

Tis' fitting now our voice to raise And stag a song of heavenly praise "All hail the vower, that raised on high The spires that point us to the sky.

IFUL CONDITION.

After Looking At Arthur E. Badger As He Lay Injured On the Cotton Mill Floor She Fainted and Since Then Has She Been a Maniac.

Violently insane, with but little hope of ultimate recovery, Miss Edna Acheson lies at the home of her parents on Center avenue.

It is a sad case.

Miss Acheson was employed in the lower cotton mill and Arthur Badger's fearful accident, by which he had his left arm twisted from his body by a revolving shaft, is responsible for her pitiful condition. When Badger was hurt, Miss Acheson, who was working at the other end of the room rushed up to see what was the matter Badger lay writhing on the floor with blood streaming down his mangled arm. Miss Acheson took one look at him and with a scream sank to the floor in a faint. When she recovered somewhat, she was taken home and symptoms of insanity at once begun to show themselves. She grew rapidly worse and inquiry at the mill this afternoon resulted in the statement that there was but scant hope entertained of her permanent improvement. The afflicted young lady is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Acheson who lives at Monterey, and is about seventeen years of age. Her father is also an employe of the cotton company.

WHAT THE MOON SAW.

A little blue eyed innocent Out in the yards at play Had chased, without a thought of wrong A mother hen away.

Her father spoke in earnest tones, And grave the words he said, While she, sad for her thoughtlessness Went to her little bed.

Again at night she sought the yards, Fearless of ghosts or owls, Where, upon porch or nest or tree, Slumbered the precious fowls.

When they with terrifying noise Flew out and off, all wild. The master sought to know the cause And met his panting child. "Father, I came to kiss the hen,"

She said in her sweet way,

"And tell her I was sorry 'cause

I scared her yesterday. The father clasped her in his arms In happiest embrace. "And I, too," said the gentle moon, "I kissed the dear, sweet face." -Agnes E. Mitchell.

MY BET.

At the little dinner of three which Alec Bradford was giving I hadn't drunk more than three glasses of wine in all. But I have been a temperate man throughout my life, and possibly even this moderate indulgence made me unwontedly rash.

Perhaps my unstrung nerves had a good deal to do with the matter as well. I had fled from the home of a tyrannical stepfather here in New York about six years ago, when the merest boy, just after my mother's death. Countless hardships had beset me since then, but now I had gained in the far west at least a hopeful semblance of prosperity. I had come back with only a single purpose—to find my twin sister, Ruth Amberley, and bring her to dwell out there in Kansas with myself and my beloved young wife.

Tearful, yet striving to smile through her tears, Clara had bidden me goodby. "It's dreadful to have you go alone, Frank," she faltered. "Still, you know, you owe it to your sister. You never wrote to tell her where you were for a long time after you'd driven your tent stakes here into Ashbyville."

"I know-I know, Clara. It was my jealousy, I suppose"-

"Jealousy of a stepfather! And of such a shocking despot as you paint him too! And how could Ruth have run away with you as you proposed in your madly boyish fashion? And as for her not answering the letters you've written her since remorse has begun to prick you-why, there isn't a doubt that she never received them. Her stepfather's you had about you tonight?" probably moved away from where he used to live, or it may be that he's died and"-

"That Ruth's dead, too," I broke in dismally, "or driven out into the bitter world by that same brute who drove me there!"

I was destined to learn on my arrival in New York that my stepfather had died over two years ago. Concerning Ruth no one could tell me. Our former home held new tenants. I made countless inquiries and even put advertisements into newspapers. My stepfather had left all his money, I discovered (no great sum either), to certain relations in Baltimore. These, answering my letters regarding the whereabouts of Ruth, could only tell me that she had left her stepfather a good while before his death, and that they believed some kind of quarrel had caused the separation.

"Some kind of quarrel!" I forlornly mused. "Oh, how horrible to think that the sister I once so dearly cherished may be in want and suffering! But of one thing I am certain. Ruth could never go wrong, no matter what hateful crisis overtook her. She was and will always stay purity and refinement to her finger tips. Our dear dead mother taught her that and gave it to her as well as the strange and sweet sanctity of inherit-

I wrote to my wife several sad letters, and one was so desperately repentant in its tenor that she answered it with a kind of sweet savagery.

"How dare you say, Frank, that you feel as if you had killed Ruth?" ran her response. "If you want to make my loneliness, which I am trying to bear as bravely as I can, still more distressing to me, you will not write again in a mood both so morbid and so absurd."

That evening, when I dined at the Brunswick with Alec Bradford and John Hathaway, two friends whom I had made in the west, and who were in New York for commercial reasons, far different from my own, I felt far more | ered kisses on her poor wasted face. wretchedly hopeless than I cared to re-

At the end of dinner, while we were drinking our coffee and smoking our tle creature she had always been, cigars, Bradford advanced his little theory, born of some converse we had held about the wickedness and depravity of "darker New York."

"I believe I could do just what you say I can't," came my words after a little flurry of discussion.

John Hathaway was rather flushed with champagne. He knocked his fist against the table and said, merrily, yet

"Make him take your bet, then, Alec. soon partially rob us of her. We'll all go 'slumming' together, as they call it."

"The bet," I said, "gives me big odds. Ten dollars from myself to $100 from Alec that nothing will happen to us if I go with both of you wherever the west, I should not be greatly suryou shall direct and in each place make | prised ifit known that I carry on my person the But perhaps, as their mutual affairs sum of $5,000!

"Never mind," laughed Bradford in his breezy, staccato way. "I'll stick to my bet." He turned to Hathaway. "Jack, you'll hold the stakes?"

"Oh, yes," came Jack's reply. "We may all get ourselves murdered, so I propose to raise my courage with a .brandy and soda."

While the waiter obeyed his orders Hathaway received my $10 and Alec's $100. Then two little paper rolls were constructed, each ensheathed in a saffron nor the onion where would be greenback. These I was to carry in ci- the glories of southern France, the bouther inner breast pocket. The season was -illabaisse and the brandade?

June, and the night a bland one; hence neither of us wore an overcoat. When all was arranged, I resumed my argument about the safety of going unprotected into quarters of the lowest class es. But I did not tell why there had lately come upon me this boldness and security. I did not choose openly to avow that in seeking my poor lost sister "everywhere" I had not neglected haunts of poverty and sorrow.

Of course it was all a mad kind of venture. If Bradford and Hathaway had not both been in that devil may care mood which sometimes comes to visitors in a great city after dining rather too well, I would readily enough have thrown our whole plan to the winds. But presently we had entered a cab, and in half an hour or so we were over in the east side of the town, among bave catarrb; and should (immediately) streets many of whose names I had scarcely heard. Then we dismissed our The remedy will give instant relief. of a place, with electrics in its windows and pictures of huge "schooners" from Professor Birkholz, of Chicago, Gives which the tawny beer prodigally overfoamed.

"Now begin," he rejoined, and in his twinkling eyes I read hints of inebriety by no means pleasant.

"Come," I said, while we were all three sipping our beer in presence of a great, blend, moon faced barkeeper and watched by a group of shabby loungers, "it's very plain, Bradford, that this whole scheme has been idiotic."

"Aha!" giggled Alec, "you're back-"inal answer until you have seen Professor Birk-holz and received his opinion.

iously whispered, "Frank is backing out, and very sensibly. The idea of three sane men like ourselves attempting this bravado game of silliness in five different places! We might regret it all our lives. Come, now, let's go up town and call the bet off."

But Bradford tossed his head stubbornly. He was the best fellow in the world at ordinary times, but drink, even in limited supply, had the ugly trick of demoralizing him.

"Not a bit of it," he muttered. "The bet isn't off at all. Frank Amberley's got to begin." Then he loudened his voice so it could be heard in every corner of the big, vulgar gilded tavern. "How much money, Frank, did you say

"Alec," pleaded Hathaway's low voice, "look at that gang of rowdies over there! We'd best all concede that we've behaved like fools. Do pull yourself together, old fellow, and"-

"How much, Frank?" cried Bradford, with an obstinate smile and a sancy shoulder shrug.

Something in his tones challenged my reckless anger. I spoke as loudly as he did and at once began to act out my prearranged part.

"Five thousand dollars," I said. Then from one pocket I drew one roll of sham bank notes and from another the second. "Twenty-five hundred dollars in each of those little packages!" Here I lifted them both and gave to each a little ostentatious flourish. Then I replaced them, adding, still in tones clear and high, "It makes me feel kind of nervous, but still I don't doubt I'll get home all right."

"Oh, Jack and I will see you safely home!" cried Bradford, with a glance across his shoulder at the listening group of loafers.

Just then something touched my arm. A young woman, who must have entered the place but a few minutes ago, stood at my side. Some trick of the garish light left her face in partial shadow, but I could see that it was very pale and hollow cheeked as if from

"Oh, sir!" she said to me in a trembling voice, "if you've got all that money, perhaps you'll spare me just a few coins! I've never (I swear it to you) been in such a place as this before. But I was so sick that I lost my chance of work in the big shirt factory not far off, and tonight my landlady has turned me into the streets, and, oh, sir"-

"Frank, what's the matter?" flew from Alec Bradford's lips as he saw me reel a little and put my hand dizzily to my head.

"Good God, Ruth! It's you!"

I caught her to my breast and show-My two friends got us a carriage be-

Indiana contributed her thousands of brave soldiers to the war, and no state bears a better record in that respect than it does. In literature it is rapidly acquiring an enviable place. In war and literature Solomon Yewell, well known as a writer as "Sol," has won an honorable position. During the late war he was a member of Co. M, 2d. N. Y. Cavalry and of the 13th Indiana Infantry Volunteers. Regarding an important circumstance he writes as follows:

"Several of us old veterans here are using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, all of them giving splendid satisfaction. In fact, we have never used remedies that compare with them. Of the Pills we must say they are the best combination of the qualities required in a preparation of their nature we have ever known. We have none but words of praise for them. They are the outgrowth of a new principle in medicine, and tone up the system wonderfully. We say to all, try these remedies."—Solomon Yewell, Marion, Ind., Dec. 5, 1892. CONFEDERATE HORSE SAW MANY BATTLES s a Rival of Belle Mosby, the Oldes! Union Horse-Has a Yankee Bullet in His Neck and Is Still Good for Several Years More of Life.

G. CHAFEE, THE mayor of Aiken, S. ., writes the New YorkWorld that the horse Belle Mosby, whose picture appeared in the World of Sunday, July 15, is not only not the only equine veteran of the war but not the oldest.

Many of the annual visitors to Aiken have seen or heard of old Jim, an old gray horse, better known to some as Wheeler. This old horse is owned by Mr. W. T. Williams of Aiken. Old Jim is 141/2 hands high and weighs 900 pounds when in good health.

For thirty years he has done service on the plantation of Mr. Williams, his work being gradually lightened as infirmities have crept upon him. At the present time he has the run of the pasture and enjoys a well earned rest. For ten years after the war he followed the fox hounds each winter.

Old Jim came from the mountains of East Tennessee, and took part in the battle of Atlanta. Falling back before Sherman's advance, or hanging on the flank of his army, old Jim's coat was daily stained by the red mud from the hills of Georgia. Crossing into South Carolina, he bagged through the swamps of the low country and bore his rider gallantly in the fight at Great Saltcatcher in Barnwell county in South Carolina. From that point, accompanying Pique's command, under Gen. Wheeler, he brought his master, Lieut. McMahon of East Tennessee, on the left flank of the invading army to

When Sherman's army, passing through Barnwell county, reached the line of the South Carolina railway Gen. Kilpatrick, with his cavalry, made a bold dash westward for the purpose of destroying the cotton mills at Graniteville, five miles west of Aiken, and possibly the Confederate powder mills in Augusta, Ga., thirteen miles further west of Graniteville. At Aiken they met with the forces of Gen. Wheeler, and were repulsed after a sharp skirmish and retired to the main body of the army. This fight determined the future fate of old Jim.

His rider, Lieut. McMahon, charged with him down a road, now South Boundary avenue, right in front of the house of Mr. Williams. They had hardly passed the front door when both horse and rider fell, the rider with a mortal wound in the breast and old Jim with a ball in his neck.

Lieut. McMahon was taken into the house of Mr. Williams, where he died in the dining room a few hours later. The stain of his life blood is still on the pine floor. Jim was condemned as worthless and ordered to be shot, but Mr. Williams begged for his life and nursed him back again to health and usefulness. From that day to this the old horse has never known a sick day, and the indications are that he will yet be able to show for several years the scars of battle and the brand "C. S." upon his shoulders.

Judges of horseflesh pronounced Jim 7 years old when he fell into the hands of his present master, which makes him now 36 years old.

Wealthy Charities.

The income of merely the principal charitable institutions having their headquarters in London amounts to over £7,000,000 per annum, or $35,000,000. That represents a sum equal to half the whole capital invested in the bank of England, says the Philadelphia Ledger. It exceeds the total revenue of all the British colonies together in 1884, and it is as much as the present total annual revenues of all the British colonies, excluding New South Wales, Victoria and Canada. If there is added to this sum the income of the smaller charities the total benevolence paid voluntarily in the metropolis does not fall far short of £10,000,000, or $50,000,000.

A flying brigade of police agents, in civilian costume, has been created to follow the president step by step wherever he goes, says the San Francisco Argonaut. When M. Casimir-Perier is about to start from the Elysee, the prefecture of police is apprised by telephone of the place to which he is going, as well as of the route he is to take. Before he has crossed the gate of the palace,a carriage is already on the street, with orders to follow the presidential conveyance, and not to lose sight of it. This maneuver is repeated several
